“Every family is a Russian novel”
-quoted by Francine de Plessix Gray

We may not have any Russian novels in our collection, but we do have works of fiction by analysts and works of literature (novels, plays, and poetry) about mental health professionals. In Come to Me, Amy Bloom shares a wonderful collection of stories about the vagaries of human lives, beginning with the line: “In the middle of the eulogy at my mother’s boring and heartbreaking funeral, I began to think about calling off the wedding”.

We also collect the first hand accounts by analysands who describe their treatment. An Unquiet Mind, by Professor of Medicine Kay Jamison, details her life-long struggle with manic-depression. Dan Gunn looks at the process of termination in Wool-Gathering or How I Ended Analysis.

Then there are always the mysteries in which a therapist plays an important part, whether he or she be the murderer or the detective (check out Amanda Cross’s In the Last Analysis or Shrink Rap by Robert Parker). Novels where psychoanalyst play a role include The Manticore by Robertson Davies, The Treatment by Daniel Menaker and D.M. Thomas’s The White Hotel.

This collection, though still small, is probably unique among libraries. Feel free to explore what we have and to suggest works we might add to it. As you browse you may come across these lines from Auden’s poem about Freud who enabled us to be:

able to approach the Future as a friend without a wardrobe of excuses, without a set mask of rectitude or an embarrassing over-familiar gesture.

Dr. Gifford and Olga Umansky’s article (pp. 3-4) is evidence that our library is becoming known, both nationally and internationally. Requests for us of our photographs come from all over and more and more scholars are finding our archives helpful. Thanks to the work of Olga Umansky our archivist, Steve Morandi our librarian, and Kate Boutin, our library school intern, the listing of our books, journals, and archival materials are available on our webpage. We are making links to other websites (see p. 4) that will allow more and more clinicians and scholars to be aware of and to use our holdings.

The library belongs to all of us. Its future, therefore, should be determined by all of us. For that reason, I suggest that, in the future, the position of Director of the Library and Library Committee members be positions elected by the entire membership. Currently the Director of the Library is chosen by the Board of Trustees and the Library Committee by the Director. My recommendation would require a by-laws change, but it is a change that I think would help all of us feel a part of the library and responsible for its maintenance and well-being.
We continue to be grateful to Dr. Morton and Raisa Newman, whose donations support the purchase of books on child analysis, and more recently, neuroscience. Recent purchases made with these funds include:

Another invaluable resource for the purchase of psychoanalytic books is the Gifford Fund, given by Dr. Sanford Gifford for the purchase of psychoanalytic materials related to the history of the discipline. Recent purchases include:

Dr. Ernest Hartmann has kindly donated a copy of his book Dreams and Nightmares: The Origin and Meaning of Dreams to the library.

Dr. Dan Jacobs continues to generously donate various psychoanalytic texts and novels to our growing library collection.

Many psychoanalytic books from the library of the late Dr. Bernard Bandler were recently donated with the kind help of Dr. Alexandra Harrison.

Dr. Marvin Krims

It is with sadness that we report the passing of Dr. Marvin Krims, a long-time member of BPSI and of the Hanns Sachs Library Committee. Dr. Krims worked as a psychiatrist aboard a Navy hospital ship during the Korean War, and eventually opened a practice in Newton, Massachusetts. Aside from private practice, he served as an Associate Clinical Professor at Tufts Medical School, as well as a Lecturer in Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School.

Marvin was a lively contributor to our Hanns Sachs Library Committee discussions and rarely missed a meeting. Later in life, he became interested in writing about the works of Shakespeare from a psychoanalytic point of view. Last spring, Marvin, as part of our Meet the Author series, gave a wonderful talk about his then newly written book, The Mind According to Shakespeare: Psychoanalysis in the Bard’s Writing.

Dr. Krims’s portrait is part of the Faces of Experience exhibit, a permanent collection of photographs of BPSI’s senior analysts on display on the second and third floors of our institute.
Celebrating Grete Bibring

On November 15, Harvard Medical School’s Countway Library held a celebration to remember the career of Dr. Grete Bibring, a psychoanalyst, and the first woman to become Chief of Psychiatry at the Beth Israel Hospital. Dr. Bibring was a long-time member of BPSI, serving as President from 1955 to 1958.

The Countway celebration included a panel discussion of Bibring’s career and her legacy for women in science. BPSI’s Director of Archives, Dr. Sanford Gifford, gave a fascinating talk about Bibring’s life, supplying many details that few people were aware of, as he had known her quite well and had interviewed her in the past.

Recent Visiting Researchers

Over the summer we had a number of visitors, to consult us and our archives. First came Peter Kizilos-Clift, a graduate student from the University of Minnesota, who is writing his dissertation on the post-war history of MIT. He explored the life and career of our colleague, Herbert I. Harris, who had many unusual interests besides his analytic practice, including directing a psychotherapy clinic at MIT.

Dr. Nellie Thompson, an analytic colleague and Chief Archivist at the New York Psychoanalytic Institute, visited several times, pursuing her research on Bertram Lewin. She presented her work on Lewin at the IPA Congress in Berlin. Lewin was a close friend of Ives Hendrick, during their analytic training at the Berlin Psychoanalytic Institute in 1928-30. In our early years, when the BPSI was becoming a training institute and was accepted by the American Psychoanalytic Association as a member of the then federation, Lewin served as a supervising analyst, commuting to and from New York on alternate weeks while our candidates commuted to New York the intervening week.

Christopher Turner consulted our archives concerning Wilhelm Reich, about whom he is writing a biography.

Douglas Kirsner, author of “Unfree Associations” (2001), which included a chapter on the BPSI-PINE split, stopped by to discuss the new edition of his book. He plans to update it by adding an extended introduction, while the basic text will be reprinted unchanged.

We have had a number of requests for the use of our photographs, from the Jewish Museum in Vienna for an exhibit and a book about Wilhelm Reich, and from the Vienna Psychoanalytic Society for an exhibit about its history.

Professor George Makari, Chief of the Department of the History of Psychiatry at Cornell Medical School, will publish several photographs from the Edward Bibring collection in a book that will appear this fall.

Our archives contributed to a workshop on the fate of émigré analysts in the US, which was held at the IPA meetings in Berlin last summer. It was chaired by Dan Jacobs; Sanford Gifford spoke about Boston analysts, Nellie Thompson about New York, and Erika Schmidt about Chicago. Our refugee analysts were almost all Viennese, but there was a strong influence of the Berlin Institute on our development, transmitted by Hendrick, Franz Alexander and Hanns Sachs, our first and second Training Analysts, respectively.

Our most unusual request is an inquiry from Ms. Donna Eichstaedt, a researcher in Denver who is writing a history of the Bear Mountain School for Boys in Silver City, New Mexico. The school was created by Dr. Walter Langer, our first non-MD member who trained in Vienna, for the residential treatment of adolescent boys. Ms. Eichstaedt was a close friend of Dr. Langer's first wife, Juanita Franks, who died only last year at the age of 104. Ms. Eichstaedt learned of our Langer archives through our homepage, and provided us with copies of historic photographs and data about Franks of which we had been unaware.

At the International Psychoanalytic Association meetings, Dr. Gifford made the acquaintance of the eminent historian of psychoanalysis, Dr. Gerhardt Fichner of the University of Tuebingen. He gave us two interesting reprints of early unpublished letters of Sigmund Freud, with reproductions of Freud's handwriting and comments by Dr. Fichner. These have been translated and are available to our members.

John Romano

An inquiry about John Romano from Leon Eisenberg led to re-opening our files about this unusual man. He was one of three “Freud Fellows,” along with George Gardner and Charles Brenner, in the pre-war years when each training-analyst was asked to volunteer to analyze one candidate free of charge. Romano was accepted as a candidate and analyzed by Helene Deutsch in 1939-41. After the war he settled in Rochester, New York, where he became chief of psychiatry and founded an important center for psychosomatic research, in collaboration with George Engel as chief of medicine. Our archives contain a fascinating annual report of his 1940-41 year as psychiatrist at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. As a one-man department, he carried out a prodigious number of activities, including consultations on the wards, teaching medical students, running several outpatient clinics and conducting research on delirium with George Engel.

BPSI Archives Website

The link between our archives and the outside world is our new archives website, which can be found at http://www.bostonpsychoanalytic.org/library/archives.html, or by clicking the “Archives” link on the main BPSI website (www.bostonpsychoanalytic.org).

Here, one can discover what archival holdings are found at BPSI, including various books, papers, letters, photographs, audio and video recordings, and other materials. The archives website is continually growing, as more material becomes processed and cataloged.

Additionally, the archives website includes links to:

- related collections at Harvard University libraries, The Library of Congress, and other archives
- American Psychoanalytic Association, JAPA, and other Psychoanalytic Institutes archives
- Google Scholar, PubMed, and Amazon citations
- entries from the International Dictionary of Psychoanalysis and free e-books from Nizkor Project, Globus Publishing, Doubleday, Page & Company, and other publishers
- book reviews, biographies, and obituaries featured in newspapers
- oral history resources at the New York Psychoanalytic Society, Columbia University, British Library, and other audio archives
- photo exhibits and anniversary sites
Meet the Author Series

Meet the Artist: John Baker
About 30 people (most of them artists) joined BPSI members on October 22 to hear John Baker, Professor of Art History at the Massachusetts College of Art and former Affiliate Scholar at BPSI (2000-2002), speak about the psychological underpinnings of some of his collages. He brought three of his works to illustrate the influences of loss, memory and revival on his art. The many questions and comments from the audience indicated how much Baker interested and engaged his audience. This is the first of what we hope will be an on-going series in which BPSI members engage in dialogue with noted artists.

Meet the Author: Phillip Freeman
Adaptations: Disquisitions on Psychoanalysis 1997-2006
On November 28, Dr. Philip Freeman discussed his new book, a collection of talks he has given at the annual graduation and spring party at BPSI for several years. The published book is accompanied by a CD containing recordings of some of these monologues.

Author's description:

Surrounded and squeezed by the pharmaceutical giants, managed care driven short term therapies, and the self-help industries, psychoanalysts have been forced out of their quiet offices and institutes into the cold worlds of commerce and community. Often the results have not been pretty. But the analysts are not alone. What profession is not on the run? Medicine, journalism, accounting, academia, publishing—all have struggled to hold onto some recognizable sense of themselves while seeking to adapt and survive.

The Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute provides the backdrop for this satirical book about serious subjects—specifically about psychoanalysis and psychoanalysts but generally about psychoanalytic values and their relevance to the struggle of professions.

Meet the Author/Editor: Michael I. Good
The Seduction Theory in its Second Century
Monday, December 10, 2007 at 7:45 PM

"The Seduction Theory is an exemplary investigation of Freud's seduction theory, or actually theories, and their implication for the later development of psychoanalytic thought. The very scholarly authors present sophisticated, multifaceted, balanced contributions, interweaving complex historical, theoretical, and clinical issues. Michael Good has achieved a masterful editorial integration of past and present perspectives on this ever-important subject."

—Harold P. Blum, MD, Clinical Professor of Psychiatry, and Training and Supervising Analyst at the Psychoanalytic Institute, New York University Medical Center.

Meet the Author: Andrea Celenza
Sexual Boundary Violations: Therapeutic, Supervisory, and Academic Contexts
Monday, February 11, 2008 at 7:45 PM

Publisher's description:

This book addresses training, supervisory, and therapeutic issues related to the consequences from sexual boundary violations among mental health professionals and clergy. These problems are discussed on theoretical and practical levels aimed at understanding, recovery, rehabilitation, training, and prevention. This book can be used in developing training, educative, and preventative programs aimed at supporting professionals of all mental health disciplines. This book provides professionals with a resource on how to understand the problem of sexual misconduct from a variety of perspectives, including precursors, risk factors, supervisory concerns, psychodynamic underpinnings, preventative methods, and rehabilitation efforts.

In addition to the events listed here, we are also planning Meet the Author event featuring George Makari (Revolution in Mind: The Creation of Psychoanalysis), which will take place later in the spring of 2008.
In the Library

New Books

The following is a list of books recently purchased by the Hanns Sachs Library:

New Photocopier

There is a new photocopier in the Hanns Sachs Library! If you have any questions about its operation, please ask our librarian Steve Morandi.

Book Returns

Please take a few moments to look around for any books, CDs, tapes, or other materials that you have borrowed from the Hanns Sachs Library over the past few months. Your prompt return of these materials ensures that our patrons can find the resources they need at the library. Thanks!

Book Sale

Many new items are being added to the book sale at BPSI. Included among the sale items are first editions and extra copies of books weeded from our stacks to make space. Each book is only $5 for hardbacks, $2 for paperbacks.

LIBRARY MEMBERSHIP

For those who are not BPSI members or students, you may join the library for an annual fee of $50. As a library member, you are entitled to borrow books and to the services of Steve Morandi for searches and xeroxing of materials. Additionally, you may use the PEP (Psychoanalytic Electronic Publishing) archive in the library, which allows for quick searches and printing of many full text articles from major psychoanalytic journals. For more information please call Steve at 617-266-0953 or e-mail him at library@bostonpsychoanalytic.org.
