

THE BOSTON PSYCHOANALYTIC SOCIETY AND INSTITUTE
141 Herrick Road, Newton Centre, Massachusetts 02459

Termination Seminar
Winter/Spring 2017 – ATP III
Stephanie R. Brody, Psy.D.

February 9, 16, 23, March 2, 9
5:30 – 7:00PM

In this brief seminar, we will grapple with the concept, principles, and application of “termination” in psychotherapy and psychoanalysis. What do we mean when we talk about termination? The immediate irony is that termination is often a process that can take months, even years to unfold, or can occur with little preparation, dramatically and precipitously. Clinicians and patients often feel deeply disrupted during the process, yet throughout clinical training, the discussion of termination is often left to the end, squeezed into curriculum. Often we rely on ideal models of endings, models that are relatively rare; curiously we never really know if there is a “right way” to close a treatment. The articles that we will read together provide us with only a few opportunities to address the numerous theoretical orientations regarding this concept. At the heart of it, we will be struggling with questions of attachment and loss in the clinical relationship, the meaning of endings, the conflict between personal and professional, and the implications of separation when there is no death.

The readings that have been chosen are meant to stimulate clinical and theoretical discussions. To that end, I would like to include a clinical presentation at each meeting and would like each of you to think about your cases and clinical experiences that may be relevant to our discussions that you would like to present.

February 9th, 2017

Week 1:

Bass, A. (2009) It Ain't over till it's Over” Infinite Conversations, Imperfect Endings, and the Elusive Nature of Termination. Psychoanalytic Dialogues, 19:744-759. PEP Web Link

Brody, S. (2009) On the Edge: Exploring the End of the Analytic Hour. Psychoanalytic Dialogues, 19:87-97. PEP Web Link

February 16

Week 2:

Freud, S. (1937) “Analysis Terminable and Interminable” S.E. XXIII p. 209-253. PEP Web Link

Loewald, HW (1988) Termination Analyzable and Unanalyzable. Psychoanalytic Study of the Child 43:155-66. PEP Web Link

February 23, 2017

Week 3:

Orgel, S. (2000) Letting Go: Some thoughts about Termination. JAPA 48:719 – 738. PEP Web Link

March 2, 2017

Week 4

Bergmann, M.S. (1988) On the Fate of the Intrapsychic Image of the Psychoanalyst After Termination of the Analysis Psychoanalytic Study of the Child 43: 137 -153. PEP Web Link

Deutsch, R. (2011) A Voice Lost, A Voice Found: After the Death of the Analyst Psychoanalytic Inquiry, 31:6: 526-535. PEP Web Link

March 9, 2017

Week 5

Gabbard, G (2009) What is “good enough” Termination? JAPA 57: 575-594. PEP Web Link

Learning Objectives:

1. At the end of the session, students will be able to discuss three basic concepts related to termination, and the role of termination throughout the psychotherapy process.
2. At the end of the session, students will be able to compare two theoretical concepts regarding termination that have historical relevance to the field of psychoanalysis.
3. At the end of this session, students will be able to identify at least two of the emotional challenges of termination from the perspective of the analyst.
4. At the end of the session, students will be able to assess two concepts of self-disclosure and its relationship to the termination process when the patient is an analyst and an analysand.
5. At the end of the session, students will be able to compare two different termination goals that are the focus of a 1-person and a 2-person psychoanalytic model.