

Clinical Implications of Bion's Theory

Instructors: Rodrigo Barahona, Psya.D and Karen Roos, LICSW

1. September 19, 2019 Introduction

Learning Objective: At the conclusion of this session, candidates will be able to define Bion's concepts of attacks on linking, and identify one essential characteristic of Bion's early period and one essential characteristic of Bion's late period.

2. September 26, 2019 Bion's Pre-psychoanalytic Experiences

Learning Objective: At the conclusion of this session, candidates will be able to explain how the experience of Sweeting's death influenced the development of Bion's concept of alpha function and to discuss Brown's concept of Constellation for Thinking.

3. October 3, 2019 Bion's Bedrock: Learning from Experience

Learning Objective: At the conclusion of this session, candidates will be able to define Bion's concepts of alpha function, beta elements, and contact barrier.

7. November 7, 2019 Late Bion: Receptivity to the unknown; emotional turbulence accompanies transformation and growth

Learning Objective: At the conclusion of this seminar, candidates will be able to identify elements of the analyst's internal setting that permit relinquishing saturated ideas and support opening oneself up to the emotional turbulence in the here and now of the session: this leads to transformation and growth in the patient.

8. November 14, 2019 Transformations in O

Learning Objective: At the conclusion of this session, candidates will be able to compare "early Bion" with "late Bion" through their discussion of Bion's theoretical and technical movement from transformations in K to transformations in O, a long journey into unknown and unmapped mental life.
